MAYOR, AFTER NIGHT WITH FRIENDS, SAYS HE WILL BAN ANTI-KLAN PARADE

Forty Klan "Policemen," All Armed and in Full Regalia of Order, are Arrested as They March Through Downtown Section of City - Two Others Beaten.

NILES, O., Nov. 1.-Reports that two men had been killed when fighting broke out today at Main and Federal streets between Klan and anti-Klan factions proved to be unfounded. Five men, all members of the anti-Klan faction were wounded, and four of them may die, but none were killed, police reported, after first stating that two had been killed.

The injured men were spirited away to a hospital. Following the declaration of martial law by Governor Donahey, orders were issued to the National Guardsmen mobilized at Warren, five miles distant, to come bere at once, and they were loaded in autos and at 2:30, were reported en route here. Whether the parade will be called off, is as yet undetermined.

Two hundred anti-klansmen, armed with sawed off shotguns and swords are massed at these street intersections, a strategic point through which all traffic bound to the klan rally must pass. They have stopped all traffic bound past that point, and the shooting occurred when the anti-klansmen attempted to stop the klan machine.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 1.—Governor Don'dley declared martial law at Niles at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 1.—Gov. Donahey this afternoon ordered the 145th regiment, Ohio National Guard, to mobilize immediately and await further instructions.

KLAN AND FOES CLASH

NILES, O., Nov. 1.-Reports that two men had been killed when fighting broke out today at Main and Federal streets between Klan and anti-Klan factions proved to be unfounded. Five men, all members of the anti-Klan faction were wounded, and four of them may die, but none were killed, police reported, after first stating that two had been killed. The injured men were spirited away to a hospital. Following the declaration of martial law by Governor Donahey, orders were issued to the National Guardsmen mobilized at Warren, five miles distant, to come here at once, and they were loaded in autos and at 2:30, were reported en route here. Whether the parade will be called off, is as yet undetermined.

Two hundred anti-klansmen, armed with sawed off shotguns and swords are massed at these street intersections, a strategic point through which all traffic bound to the klan rally must pass. They have stopped all traffic bound past that point, and the shooting occurred when the anti-klansmen attempted to stop the klan machine.

weeks' meeting at Elmira, N. Y., last Sunday. In all 6,366 persons "hit the trail" or reconsecrated their lives during the campaign. He preached 79 sermons in this interim to 400,000 persons. Elmira co-operating churches received 3,685 new members besides 783 children. Churches of the city not in the revival benefited by 373 new members, while 1,527 expressed their purpose of allying themselves with congregations in other towns and cities. Some of the latter signed cards for churches in Los Angeles and San Francisco, Cal., Seattle, Wash., and in places in Connecticut, Louisiana and Florida.

Speaking of the Billy Sunday campaign in Elmira, N. Y., the Elmira Advertiser says editorially: "Elmira has experienced a wonderful religious awakening. It can not be truthfully contradicted that the methods employed by Mr. Sunday appeal to many. Many thousands of people have reconsecrated their lives or expressed publicly a desire to lead a Christian life." The result will be felt in this city for many years. Elmira will be a better city because of the work of Billy Sunday.

"The Leprosy of Sin," the subject of Dr. Biederwolf's sermon on Saturday, is one of the big sermons of his repertoire. Everywhere he has preached it, it has deeply impressed the hearers.

votes, a margin of 18 over the 266 majority required for election. The defection of tither New Jersey or Indiana and one of the tiny states could be suffered in this table and still the Democrats wiuld win .But the loss of New York could not be suffered nor have the Democratic managers been able to figure any combination of states outside of New York that would give Davis 266 in the college.

Of the state's listed above, the Democrats count themselves as certain of 189, the same comprising the solid south and the border states, normally Democratic territory. This is their real minimum. In no event do the Democrats anticipate going below this Republican Figures.

On the Republican side, the managers, while claiming totals, as high as 391 in the electoral college, actually expect to have around 300. The figure of 391 is based upon the Democrats carrying nothing except what Cox carried, the low tide of Democratic accomplishment in modern po-litical history, and La Follette carrying nothing except Wisconsin. This 391 then represents their maximum

Their minimum hopes run as low as but no lower, according to the inside figures.

The "minimum table" of the Repubcan managers follows:

California, 13; Colorado, 6; Con-necticut, 7; Delaware, 3; Idaho, 4; Illinois, 29; Indiana, 15; Kansas, 10; Maine, 6; Massasschusetts, 18; Michigan, 15; Nebraska, 8; New Hamphire, 4; New Jersey, 14; New York, 45; Ohio, 24; Oregon, 5; Pennsylvania, 38; Rhode Island, 5; Utah, 4; ermont, 4; Wyoming, 3-Total 280.

This does not take into account Iowa, 13; Nevada, 3; Washington, 8; or South Dakota, 5—A total of 29 which the G. O. P. managers feel fairly confident of carrying. Granted ail these, it would give Coolidge 309 in La Follette Strength.

Here again the importance of New York is seen. Substract New York's block of 45 from this 309 and it would leave Calvin Coolidge with but 264 votes in the electoral college, two short of a majority.

The actual La Follette strength is the question mark of the whole business. If he carries nothing but his own Wisconsin, the Republican leaders feel they have pretty easy sailing. Give him a sweep in the west, give him the six states that his most optimistic supporters accord him, Iowa, Minnesota, the two Dakotas, Washington and Wisconsin, totalling 55 electoral votes, and it is well within the range of possibility that the house of representatives may be called upon to choose the next president.

La Follette's maximum and mininum hopes are confined in narrower lines. His minimum, of course, is Wisconsin, with 13. His maximum embraces, in addition to the 55 listed above, the states of Nevada, 3; Nebraska, 8; Montana, 4; California, 13, and Arizona and New Mexico, with 3 each, making a grand total of 89.

Coolidge is Favorite. The cockpit is in New York so far as the major parties are concerned. Canny Wall Street, its finger on the hectic pulse of the Empire state, is betting 8 and 9 to 1 on Coolidge's carrying New York state, and by the ame token, winning the election.

With his back to the wall, and fighting shoulder to shoulder with Tammany, John W. Davis is battling for these 45 votes than run from the Atlantic on the east to the Great Lakes on the west. That it is not altogether a losing fight is exemplified by the remarkable drift of labor to his standard and away from LaFollette's in this closing week. The big-"The supernatural power of the de gest trades unions in New York have vil is admitted. It is not surprising flopped this week. The ultimate effect of this can only be disclosed on

SHAVINGS AND SAWDUST FOUND IN DR. BIEDERWOLF'S TABERNACLE

Billy Sunday closed his six weeks' meeting at Elmira, N. Y., last Sunday. In all 6,366 persons "hit the trail" or reconsecrated their lives during the campaign. He preached 79 sermons in this interim to 400,000 persons. Elmira co-operating churches received 3,685 new members besides 783 children. Churches of the city not in the revival benefited by 373 new members, while 1,527 expressed their purpose of allying themselves with congregations in other towns and cities. Some of the latter signed cards churches in Los Angeles and San Francisco, Cal., Seattle, Wash., and in places in Connecticut, Louisiana and Florida.

Speaking of the Billy Sunday campaign in Elmira, N. Y., the Elmira Advertiser says editorially: "Elmira has experienced a wonderful religious awakening. It can not be truthfully contradicted that the methods employed by Mr. Sunday appeal to many. Many thousands of people have reconsecrated their lives or expressed publicly a desire to lead a Christian life." The result will be felt in this city for many years. Elmira will be a better city because of the work of Billy Sunday.

Judicial Ticket

Besides ballots containing the names of nominees for president, state, district and county officers and two special propositions -the anti-police captaincy referendum and the county jail bond issue—a judicial ticket will be handed Columbiana county electors who exercise the right of suffrage next Tues-

Although the judicial ticket is non-partisan, the candidates were nominated by the respective parties at the primaries on August 12 or presented petitions in order to get places on the ballot. Seeking the respective judgeships are Republicans, Democrats and one Socialist.

On the Columbiana county ballot appear the names of candidates for four judicial places-long and short terms for judge of the supreme court and judges of the appellate and probate courts.

The Republican candidates for the long term on the supreme court bench are Judge James E. Robinson, who has served with honor to the state and himself, and Reynolds R. Kinkaide, who is well qualified for the place. Two are to be elected.

No Republican candidate was nominated for the short term on the supreme court bench. Judge Harry L. Conn, a Democrat, who was named to fill the vacancy caused by death of Judge Wanamaker, is opposed by Nicholas Klein, a Socialist. Judge Pollock, an able lawyer and a man who has the experience of 16 years on the bench, is the Republican nominee for reelection to the appellate bench.

The Privileged Jaywalker

The director of the board of safety in New York city objects to a proposed ordinance subjecting "jaywalkers" to arrest, say-

"The mere passing of a law on jaywalking will not stop it. Subjecting the people of this city to arrest if they jaywalk is trespassing upon the civil rights of the inhabitants. The pedestrian has the right to use the highways, whereas it is only a privilege for vehicular traffic to operate upon the highways, and can be revoked by order of the court when the privilege is abused."

He says further that if such a rule were established, the courts would be clogged with jaywalkers and, in reprisal, people "would lynch every motorist whether he was at fault or not, when a pedestrian was injured."

Really, as our English friends might say, this seems to be "putting it a bit thick." If people have legal rights on highways when they walk, but no legal rights when they ride, law is indeed a strange thing.

A mere layman, in his ignorance, might fancy that the streets and roads belong to citizens as citizens, and that they are entitled to walk or ride thereon as they prefer, making whatever rules seem desirable for the proper distribution of traffic. And as matters stand, the same inexpert layman might add, the sovereign people have seen fit to provide sidewalks and crosswalks for pedestrians, and the space between for vehicles, with traffic officers in congested thoroughfares to see that where the tracks of pedestrians and vehicles meet, each gets its turn at crossing. And according to such an interpretation, pedestrians may have no more right in the middle of a busy street than motorists have on the sidewalk.

If this is not the law, we may rest assured that it will be, sooner or later. For laws are made by majorities, and indications are that a majority of citizens will soon be motorists.

PARIS, Nov. 1.-Paris theaters are giving their audiences plenty of thrills these days. A little Montmartre theater has just opened with a veritable novelty in horror, a two-act melodrama called "The Right to Die." There is first a gruesome scene in a sombre room lighted by a solitary green lamp, with a storm beating outside, then a discussion and after this the beautiful heroine jumps from a window in the presence of her erstwhile lover, who is shot and killed by the irate husband, who happens to appear at the opportune moment.

"Le Gese," at the Theater de la Renaissance, is perhaps a bit less hair-raising, but one of the most owerful modern pieces that has appeared on the Paris stage for several years. It was written by a serious French academician in collaboration with Henry Duvernois, who adapted the play from his own story of "Gisele." There are but four characters on the stage-Lucien Aumailles, a frivolous man of 40 years, who has the habit of playing with women; Lucien's son, Philippe, a young and serious student; Marceline Vallier, young wife of an old philosopher, and her daughter, Gisele, an innocent and timid girl in her teens. While the two children are discovering their first romance Gisele surprises her mother in the arms of Lucien and becomes disgusted with her first knowledge of love. Later, when Philippe attempts to demonstrate his fondness for her, she loses all confidence in everyone and, seizing a revolver, kills

The little Theater du Grand Guignol, the real "theater of horrors," is, of course, on hand with a regular thriller, this time the scene being laid in a house for the blind soldiers. The mother of a deaf mute brings him to the institution to arrange about is entrance for work and he is left alone in the office of the director for a few minutes, just long enough for a blind inmate to come, hear the child moving about and suspect he is a thief, inasmuch as the "pay envelope" has just been brought to the rector before his arrival. The deaf child can see the blind man but cannot explain his presence there. The latter cails for help and at once several of the inmates arrive and strangle the child before his mother can come to rescue him.

But there is a gay spot in Paris as well. Balleff's "Bat" has flitted back and is delighting Parisians with new artistic wonders and rollicking new highji F of Russian flavor and bizarre colors There is the "Granda Opera Italiana," and excellent parody of operatic floridness, and "Stenka Razine," hich is a thrilling episode in the life of a Volga bandit. Several old family photograph album tableaux and cameos, lovely and quaint, get much applause, and "The Arrival at Bethlehem," from the vette Guilbert "Golden Legends," a little criticism. The "Wooden Soldiers" had been put away upon the top shelf never to appear again. Balieff was sure that the people had seen enough of them in two years. But the first night there was so many calls for this popular act that they had to march out again and go through all their delightful wooden

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.- Manhattan is filled with vivacious foolish little women who make fashion the prevailing influence in their lives. They have nothing particular to recommend them so they effect an arrant suobbishness.

They want to be known as "smart." They drift from tea-room to cafe with impoverished monocled noblemen and hand kissing princes. Their husbands are merely conveniences who slave mostly in Wall Street so that they may have charge accounts. These are the types who are bacon for dressmaking establishments. Flattery makes them buy extravagantly. A mere telephone call that a new frock from Paris was made just for them causes them to come on the run. A male milliner tells me of one that came into his place for one hat. He went into ecstasies over some bonnets he couldn't sell as he tried them on her and she went away with a round dozen. Their age is usually between 40 and 50. There is another who gives "at homes" to long haired poets and mediocre daubers of the Village Her husband is a wizened little man with

The effort obviously was to appear "smart." And I'm panning the ladies for the same ambition. So if there is such a thing as "doing a way in a recent test. Nine months ago a New York refining company decided to move its office fo to the little Illinois town where the company's rece finery was located. The proposal was put up to the clerks, salesmen and executives of the New York headquarters.

I saw a class of about 50 beginners. They were in bloomers and sweaters and after their first lesson all went home limping. The teacher tells me it takes several months to achieve the desired result.

As a boy I was proficient in walking on my hands. I used to do it in front of the homes of girls I admired in the hope they might be peeping from behind some window curtain. SOME SMALL TOWN ADVANTAGES WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.-The attractions of Main Street have triumphed over those of Broad.

These dyed-in-the-wool Manhattanites were told that if they would try life in the middle west for six months they would be given return expenses for themselves, their families and their household goods if they wished to get back to the metropolis. Out of 200 employes, only 19 asked for return passage at the end of the experimental period.

The rest have adjusted themselves to a new kind of existence, far removed from the world of subways, congested traffic, theatrical first nights, two-dollar movies, skyscrapers and large department stores. They found that in a town of 7,000 there is a decided scarcity of apartments with automatic refrigerators, trick beds, and switch-boards and janitor service. But for a small deposit and monthly payments less than city apartment rents it was possible to buy a bungalow and most of the employes adopted this solution of the housing prob-

The newcomers to the Illinois town were pleased to discover that country club life, which in New York was known to most of them only by hearsay, was a practical possibility in their new community. They also found that New York salaries could be stretched surprisingly far in a place where inducements to spend mony were fewer and less persua-sive. A good many of the employes of the company invested in automobiles for the first time. Back home garage rent was as much of a problem as the original cost of the car, but the garage question is negligible in a small community.

SHOPS NOT SO GOOD

The shops and the movies of Main Street were a blow to the wives and daughters of the employes when they first arrived from the city that "gets everything first." This seemingly serious drawback was somewhat lessened by the strenuous efforts of the town's business men to attract the 300 new residents from the city.

These details show that from a sociological viewpoint the refining company's move might be considered successful. The transplanted white collar workers are reported to be satisfied and thriving in their new environment.

The magnet-like attraction of the big city has been regularly taken as a matter of course, just as the drabness of small town life has become proverbial. A big research organization has been working out a project to make New York and sections within commuting distance of it more livable as they become steadily more crowded. It is estimated by this organization that in 75 years from now New York and its environs will have a population of 37,000,000.

If the attractions of the small town can come to vie seriously with those of the large city, however, it would seem possible that there might be a even development of the country. If the plan tried by the New York company should be adopted by other large industrial concerns we might see an entire redistribution of the population in the United States, with an exodus from the cities to the smaller communities.

This is a possibility, but it is more likely that the refining company's test will be significant mainly as a refutation of the popular saying, "Once a New Yorker, always a New Yorker." Complex economic conditions strongly influence the flow of populations. ulation and are closely linked with the social cond

The refining company reports that in its case the policy of conducting its entire business in a small town is successful. Officials of the firm find that greater efficiency is obtained in the small town, because the morale of the employes is better. More fresh air, outdoor sports, home cooking, calmer nerves, less time loss from illness and late commutation trains are said to have resulted in more rested and more alert workers. Team spirit is also increased. It is found that when the proministrative and distributing divisions are all together each worker has a clearer understanding of the function of the individual and of the department as parts of a great whole.

OPERATING COSTS LOWERED

The amount ordinarily spent by the firm for a year's office rent in New York was sufficient to build a concrete office building in the new location. Operating all departments of the business in one place eliminated the delays and costs formerly hecidental to communication.

The possible economics of this system are obvious. Yet because of the vast territory served by large concerns, sales forces and executives of such business organizations have for the most part found it necessary to stay close to the pulse of trade in New York, or in the center of their particular industry. The exception to the general rule is the company that sells all or most of its output in the locality near its factory.

A few cases somewhat like that of the New York refining company are to be found in the south ern textile industry. The main difference is that the textile mills which are springing up in the south are new plants. They are not old established firms being moved from the mill centers of New England. The textile industry has become interested in the idea of making certain kinds of cloth in the south near the source of the cotton, and of selling direct to southern markets. The new mills are using from the southern mountain country and finding less expert, but less expensive and less inclined to agitation than the immigrant elements in many New England mill towns.

The chief difficulty in establishing the southern mills has been the lack of experts to put designs on the woven cloth. This meant that the rough goods had to be sent north to be stamped or dyed before it could be distributed to the consumer. finishers are being obtained by the southern mills. the difficulty is being met, and finished material can be distributed to southern markets without expense of heavy freight rates.

This is an outstanding example of decentralization industry at present. If complete business organizations are to be spread more evenly over the country, the southern textile mills' method of selling to a comparatively limited section will have adopted. Such a policy would fit in with the development of many small industrial concerns, rather than with the big business idea which is at present popular in the United States.

Besides ballots containing the names of nominees for president, state, district and county officers and two special propositions -the anti-police captaincy referendum and the county jail bond issue—a judicial ticket will be handed Columbiana county electors who exercise the right of suffrage next Tuesday.

Although the judicial ticket is non-partisan, the candidates were nominated by the respective parties at the primaries on August 12 or presented petitions in order to get places on the ballot. Seeking the respective judgeships are Republicans, Democrats and one Socialist.

On the Columbiana county ballot appear the names of candidates for four judicial places-long and short terms for judge of the supreme court and judges of the appellate and probate courts.

The Republican candidates for the long term on the supreme court bench are Judge James E. Robinson, who has served with honor to the state and himself, and Reynolds R. Kinkaide, who is well qualified for the place. Two are to be elected.

A little Montmartre theater has just opened with a veritable novelty in horror, a two-act melodrama called "The Right to Die." There is first a gruesome scene in a sombre room lighted by a solitary green lamp, with a storm beating outside, then a discussion and after this the beautiful heroine jumps from a window in the presence of her erstwhile lover, who is shot and killed by the irate husband, who happens to appear at the opportune moment.

"Le Gese," at the Theater de la Renaissance, is perhaps a bit less hair-raising, but one of the most owerful modern pieces that has appeared on the Paris stage for several years. It was written by a serious French academician in collaboration with Henry Duvernols, who adapted the play from his own story of "Gisele." There are but four charac-ters on the stage—Lucien Aumailles, a frivolous man of 40 years, who has the habit of playing with women; Lucien's son, Philippe, a young and serious student; Marceline Vallier, young wife of an old philosopher, and her daughter, Gisele, an innocent and timid girl in her teens.

While the two children are discovering their first romance Gisele surprises her mother in the arms of Lucien and becomes disgusted with her first knowledge of love. Later, when Philippe attempts to monstrate his fondness for her, she loses all confidence in everyone and, seizing a revolver, kills herself.

The little Theater du Grand Guignol, the real "theater of horrors," is, of course, on hand with a regular thriller, this time the scene being laid in a house for the blind soldiers. The mother of a deaf mute brings him to the institution to arrange about his entrance for work and he is left alone in the office of the director for a few minutes, just long enough for a blind inmate to come, hear the child moving about and suspect he is a thief, inasmuch as the "pay envelope" has just been brought to the director before his arrival. The deaf child can see the blind man but cannot explain his presence there. The latter calls for help and at once several of the inmates arrive and strangle the child before his mother can come to rescue him.

But there is a gay spot in Paris as well. Balleff's "Bat" has flitted back and is delighting Parisians with new artistic wonders and rollicking new highji is of Russian flavor and bizarre colors. There is the "Granda Opera Italiana," and excellent parody of operatic floridness, and "Stenka Razine," which is a thrilling episode in the life of a Volga Several old family photograph album tableaux and cameos, lovely and quaint, get much applause, and "The Arrival at Bethlehem," from the Yvette Guilbert "Golden Legends," a little criticism. The "Wooden Soldiers" had been put away upon the top shelf never to appear again. Balleff was sure that the people had seen enough of them in two But the first night there was so many calls for this popular act that they had to march out again and go through all their delightful wooden Next morning the girl had disappeared. So, too, had the silver!

A stroller paused before the window of a clothing store on "yokel row," where large and lurid signs proclaimed a bargain sale. In a twinkling the proprietor was gesticulating at his side.

"Good bargains," he said. "You got money and feel like some speculations-what?"

Workmen are making repairs on the wires in a schoolhouse one Saturday, when a small boy wan-"What you doin'?"

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.- Manhattan is filled with vivacious foolish little women who make fashion the prevailing influence in their lives. They have nothing particular to recommend them so they effect an arrant snobbishness.

They want to be known as "smart." They drift from tea-room to cafe with impoverished monocled noblemen and hand kissing princes. Their husbands are merely conveniences who slave mostly in Wall Street so that they may have charge accounts.

These are the types who are bacon for dressmaking establishments. Flattery makes them buy extravagantly. A mere telephone call that a new frock from Paris was made just for them causes them to come on the run.

A male milliner tells me of one that came into his place for one hat. He went into ecstasies over some bonnets he couldn't sell as he tried them on her and she went away with a round dozen. Their age is usually between 40 and 50.

There is another who gives "at homes" to long haired poets and mediocre daubers of the Village attics. Her husband is a wizened little man with pale blue eyes and a melancholy expression. He came one night and found his house filled with cadging artists.

That day he had faced bankruptcy and he went to his bedroom and put a builet through his head. In his farewell note he wrote: "I came home for a little sympathy but could not get it. Had you encouraged me when I needed it instead of these polite wastrels this would not have happened."

Very few of these women have been glorified by motherhood. Home ties mean nothing. Gadding is their metier. They read the latest book and their conversation is made up of quotations from it until the next one is published.

Reading over the above convinces me I am only a few inches behind my dotage and crawling slowly. It sounds as though it were written by a querulous old man with wrinkled face, a touch of gout and an asthmatic wheeze.

As a matter of fact only yesterday I bloomed out in a scarlet tie that would shame a tin-horn The effort obviously was to appear "smart." And I'm panning the ladies for the same ambition. So if there is such a thing as "doing a split" in writing I have achieved it as well as the most accomplished musical revue high kicker.

Speaking of the split, one of the dramatic dancing schools has a teacher who gives lessons in this phase of acrobatics. I saw a class of about 50 They were in bloomers and sweaters and after their first lesson all went home limping. The teacher tells me it takes several months to achieve the desired result.

As a boy I was proficient in walking on my I used to do it in front of the homes of girls I admired in the hope they might be peeping from behind some window curtain. Before writing this I tried to see if I had lost control of the art. In a word, I had. I landed on my back with a thud and upset a reading lamp. My wife came running in from the next room blandly to inquire if I had lost my mind-if any. I tried for a reply freighted with dignity and, failing, took on an air of injured innocence. As a matter of fact more than my innocence was injured-and don't ask questions. Copyrighted, 1924, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

SOME SMALL TOWN ADVANTAGES

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1 .- The attractions of Main Street have triumphed over those of Broad. way in a recent test. Nine months ago a New York refining company decided to move its office for to the little Illinois town where the company's refinery was located. The proposal was put up to the clerks, salesmen and executives of the New York

These dyed-in-the-wool Manhattanites were told that if they would try life in the middle west for six months they would be given return expenses for themselves, their families and their household goods if they wished to get back to the metropolis. Out of 200 employes, only 19 asked for return passage at the end of the experimental period.

The rest have adjusted themselves to a new kind of existence, far removed from the world of subways, congested traffic, theatrical first nights, two-dollar movies, skyscrapers and large department stores. They found that in a town of 7,000 there is a decided scarcity of apartments with automatic refrigerators, trick beds, and switch-boards and janitor service. But for a small deposit and monthly payments less than city apartment rents it was possible to buy a bungalow and most of the employes adopted this solution of the housing prob-

The newcomers to the Illinois town were pleased to discover that country club life, which in New York was known to most of them only by hearsay, was a practical possibility in their new community. They also found that New York salaries could be stretched surprisingly far in a place where inducements to spend mony were fewer and less persuasive. A good many of the employes of the company invested in automobiles for the first time. Backhome garage rent was as much of a problem as the original cost of the car, but the garage question is negligible in a small community.

SHOPS NOT SO GOOD

The shops and the movies of Main Street were a blow to the wives and daughters of the employes when they first arrived from the city that "gets everything first." This seemingly serious drawback was somewhat lessened by the strenuous efforts of the town's business men to attract the 300 new residents from the city.

These details show that from a sociological viewpoint the refining company's move might be considered successful. The transplanted white collar workers are reported to be satisfied and thriving in their new environment.

The magnet-like attraction of the big city has been regularly taken as a matter of course, just as the drabness of small town life has become proverbial. A big research organization has been working out a project to make New York and sections within commuting distance of it more livable as they become steadily more crowded. It is estimated by this organization that in 75 years from now New York and its environs will have a popul-

If the attractions of the small town can come to vie seriously with those of the large city, however, it would seem possible that there might be a more even development of the country. If the plan tried by the New York company should be adopted by other large industrial concerns we might see an entire redistribution of the population in the United States, with an exodus from the cities to the smaller

This is a possibility, but it is more likely that the refining company's test will be significant mainly as a refutation of the popular saying, "Once a New Yorker, always a New Yorker." Complex economic conditions strongly influence the flow of population and are closely linked with the social cond

The refining company reports that in its case the policy of conducting its entire business in a small town is successful. Officials of the firm find that greater efficiency is obtained in the small town, because the morale of the employes is better. More fresh air, outdoor sports, home cooking, calmer nerves, less time loss from illness and late commutation trains are said to have resulted in more rested and more alert workers. Team spirit is also increased. It is found that when the producing, administrative and distributing divisions are all together each worker has a clearer understanding of the function of the individual and of the department as parts of a great whole.

OPERATING COSTS LOWERED

The amount ordinarily spent by the firm for a year's office rent in New York was sufficient to build a concrete office building in the new location. Operating all departments of the business in one place eliminated the delays and costs formerly incidental to communication.

The possible economics of this system are obvious. Yet because of the vast territory served by large concerns, sales forces and executives of such business organizations have for the most part found it necessary to stay close to the pulse of trade in New York, or in the center of their particular industry. The exception to the general rule is the company that sells all or most of its output in the locality near its factory.

A few cases somewhat like that of the New York refining company are to be found in the south ern textile industry. The main difference is that the textile mills which are springing up in the south are new plants. They are not old established firms being moved from the mill centers of New England. The textile industry has become interested in the idea of making certain kinds of cloth in the south near the source of the cotton, and of selling direct southern markets. The new mills are using from the southern mountain country and findh less expert, but less expensive and less inclined to agitation than the immigrant elements in many New England mill towns. The chief difficulty in establishing the southern mills has been the lack of experts to put designs on the woven cloth. This meant that the rough goods had to be sent north to be stamped or dyed before it could be distributed to the consumer. finishers are being obtained by the southern mills the difficulty is being met, and finished material can be distributed to southern markets without expense of heavy freight rates.

This is an outstanding example of decentraliza tion industry at present. If complete business organizations are to be spread more evenly over the coun try, the southern textile mills' method of selling to a comparatively limited section will have to be adopted. Such a policy would fit in with the development of many small industrial concerns, rather than with the big business idea which is at present popular in the United States.

I was always in my place in church; I contributed to the support of the church in various ways. I was born and brought up here. My father was a Christian man, and we had a family altar. We had grace at the table, but our nearest neighbors, about a quarter of a mile from us, were just the opposite sort of people, and we were brought up to leave them alone. When I came to manhood I married, and the eldest son of that family married and set tled on the old homestead, and I be gan to bring up my family the same way to keep them away from those children and let them alone.

"Sometimes the man worked for me: he was a good workman, but oc-casionally he would drink and I had to discharge him. But about three years ago he was terribly mangled by an accident at the gravel pit and he was sent home to die. The doctor came and he said: 'My man, you have only about an hour to live. What can I do to help you get ready?"

"'You can't do anything; it's too late, too late,' was the reply.
"The doctor said: 'I am not a Christ ian man, but if I were going to die tonight, I would want somebody to pray for me. Don't you want the minister called?'

From the instant when, Saturday night, she had been gripped suddenly in a man's strong arms, when another man had smothered her outcry, she had known in her heart that Bayne Trevors was taking his desperate chance in the game. But in the darkness she had had only the two vague blurs of their bodies to guess at. They had been masked; her own eyes were covered, a bandage brought tightly over them, her mouth gagged, her hands tied behind her, her body lifted into the saddle-all in a moment. Neither man had spoken. Then, tied in the saddle, she only knew that she was riding, that one man rode in front of her, leading her horse, the other following close behind. The sense of direction which she had lost in those first five minutes she had never been given opportunity to regain. She might, even now, be a gunshot from her own ranch; she might be twenty miles from it.

For the greater part of that Saturday night they had ridden; and when trails died under them and rocks rose steeply, they walked, she and one man. The other stayed with the horses. Not once did she hear a man's voice; she did not know whether it was Trevors himself, or Quinnion, or some utter stranger who forced her into this hiding.

They had climbed cliffs, now going down into chasms, now following roaring creeks or making their way along the spine of some rock ridge. The one man with her was masked, his eyes rather guessed at than seen through the slits of his baudanna handkerchief. He had jerked the bandage from her eyes, since blindfolded she would make such poor progress. But still he guarded his tongue.

"He would speak," she thought, "but that I would recognize his voice. Trevors or Quinn on? Which?"

Feeling the first quick spurt of hope when she saw that there was but one man to deal with, she But that hope died swiftly as she recognized that no such opportunity was to be granted her. Once she paused, looking to a possible leap over a low ledge and escape in a thick bit of timber. But the two eyes through the slits in the improvised mask had been keen and quick, a heavy hand was laid on her arm, she felt the fingers bite into her flesh as he sought to drive into her a full comprehension of his grim determination that she should not escape.

It was when they had clambered high upon a mass of tumbled boulders, topping a ridge, that Judith had seen the man's face. Docilely she had obeyed his gestures for an hour; now, suddenly maddened at the silence and the mask over his face, she sprang unexpectedly upon him, shoving him from the rock on which he had stepped, snatching off his mask as she did so. For the first time she heard his voice, cursing her coolly as he gripped and held her.

It was Bayne Trevors, at last come out into the open, his eyes hard on hers.

"It's just as well that you know whom you are up against," he said as he held her with his hand IOE'S CAR heavy on her shrinking shoulder.

Summoning all of the reckless fearlessness which was her birthright, she laughed at him coolly, laughed as the two stood against the sky-line, upon the barren breast of a lonesome land.

"So you are a fool, after all Bayne Trevors!" she jeered at him. "Fool enough to mix first-hand in a dangerous undertaking."

Trevors shrugged.

"Yes?" He slipped the handkerchief into his pocket and stared at her with a glint of anger in the blue gray of his eyes. He lifted his broad shoulders. "Or wise man enough to do my own work when needs be, and when I'd have no bungling? I'm going to square with you, girl. Square with you for meddling, for a bullet-hole in each shoulder. If there's a fool in our little junketing party, it's a girl who thought she could handle a man's-size

They went on, over the ridge and down. Judith made no second attempt to surprise him, for always his eyes watch her. Nor did she seek to hold back or in any way to hamper him now. For, swiftly adjusting herself to the new conditions, she made her first decision: Trevors did think her a "fool of a that man's way of his. Let him think her a little girls." Trevors did sneer at her helplessness n fool; let him hold her in his contempt; let him grow to think her cowed and afraid and helpless.

Then, when the time came-Again she had been blindfolded; seeing the look in Trevors' eyes, she had offered no objection. Again she had followed him in a darkness made at sunrise by a bandage across her eyes. Again, the bandage removed, she winked at the sunlight. Again they climbed ridges, dropped down into tiny valleys, fought their way along thunderous ravines where the water was lashed into white foam. Again blindd, again trudging on, her whole body beginning to tremble with fatigue, the weakness of hunger upon her. And at length, out of a canyon, making a perilo is way up the steep walls of rock, they came to the mouth of the black cavern in which she lay now, waiting for the sound of a stirring foot. Only an instant had Judith stood upon the ledge outside the cave before she was thrust into the black interior. But in that instant her eager eyes had made out, upon a tiny bit of table-land across the chasm of the gorge, a cabin, sending aloft a plume of smoke. Then, after an hour, the terrible woman had come to whom Trevors had intrusted her, bringing food and water in her hard, blackened hands, carrying the flickering fires of madness in her unfathomable eyes. A lantern set on the floor made rude shadows, and out of them crept this woman, leering at Trevors, peering at Judith, licking her thin lips, and chuckling to herself.

"I have brought her back to you, Ruth," he said, speaking softly, more softly than Judith had thought the man could speak. "You will know what to do with her. And you will not let her escape you again."

The mad woman, for only too plainly was her reason strangely misshapen, stood in silence, her Ligreat muscular body looming high above Judith's, a giant of a woman, bigger than Trevors even, broad and heavy, her forearms trick and corded, her bare throat like the bull nock of a prize-fighter. Again blindd, again trudging on, her whole body beginning to tremble with fatigue, the weakness of hunger upon her. And at length, out of a canyon, making a perilo is way up the steep walls of rock, they came to the mouth of the black cavern in which she lay now, waiting for the sound of a stirring foot.

Only an instant had Judith stood upon the ledge outside the cave before she was thrust into the black interior. But in that instant her eager eyes had made out, upon a tiny bit of table-land across the chasm of the gorge, a cabin, sending aloft a plume of smoke.

Then, after an hour, the terrible woman had come to whom Trevors had intrusted her, bringing food and water in her hard, blackened hands, carrying the flickering fires of madness in her unfathomable eyes. A lantern set on the floor made rude shadows, and out of them crept this woman, leering at Trevors, peering at Judith, licking her thin lips, and chuckling to herself.

"I have brought her back to you, Ruth," he said, speaking softly, more softly than Judith had thought the man could speak. "You will know what to do with her. And you will not let her escape you again."

The mad woman, for only too plainly was her reason strangely misshapen, stood in silence, her All great muscular body looming high above Judith's, a giant of a woman, bigger than Trevors even, broad and heavy, her forearms trick and corded, her bare thioat like the bull nock of a prize-fighter. KIDNAPING PROFITABLE IN JAPAN, BUT KEEN POLICE ARE STOPPING IT

TOKIO-The kidnaping business is a profitable one in Japan For the most part they keep one guess ahead of the nimble, besworded Japanese gendarme for only a month or two, and then they are given a long stretch of unoccupied time behind rusty gratings to ponder over their one bad guess.

One man, however, who was assisted by his wife, succeeded in dodging the police long enough to kidnap 77 women and girls in a country district not far from the capital. Their practice was to entice their victims into moving picture theatres, drop a little powder in the tea which is served between reels, and sell the unconscious person to restaurant and tea house keepers.

They guessed that they would take a chance on the credentials of the stranger who said he was a tea house proprieter and offered to buy their 78th victim-and now they are guessing how long it will be before they see another movie

POEMS THAT LIVE

Never Trouble Trouble. I used to hear a saying That had a deal of pith; It gave a cheerful spirit To face existence with, Especially when matters Seemed domed to go askew 'Twas "Never trouble trouble Till troubl troubles you." Not woes at hand, those coming Are hardest to resist; We hear them stalk like giants, We hear them through a mist. But big things in the brewing So never trouble truble Till trouble troubles you Just look at things through glasse That show the evidence; One lens of them is courage. The other common sense. Copies of City's Traffic Code Now At Auto Club Office

Four thousand copies of the recently enacted traffic ordinance have been printed by the Columbiana County Motor Club and are now available for all motorists within the East Liverpool district at the club's headquarter, 129 West Fifth street.

The ordinance, which was prepared under the direction of the automobile club officials, conforms with the state motor vehicle law and the ordinance in existence in most of the larger cities. It became effective here on October 15.

The measure has been published in booklet form in order that motorists may familiarize themselves with the traffic regulations not only as they exist here but in other cities. They are free for the asking.

KIDNAPING PROFITABLE IN JAPAN. BUT KEEN POLICE ARE STOPPING IT

TOKIO-The kidnaping business is a profitable one in Japan. For the most part they keep one guess ahead of the nimble, besworded Japanese gendarme for only a month or two, and then they are given a long stretch of unoccupied time behind rusty gratings to ponder over their one bad guess.

One man, however, who was assisted by his wife, succeeded in dodging the police long enough to kidnap 77 women and girls in a country district not far from the capital. Their practice was to entice their victims into moving picture theatres, drop a little powder in the tea which is served between reels, and sell the unconscious person to restaurant and tea house keepers.

They guessed that they would take a chance on the credentials of the stranger who said he was a tea house proprietor and offered to buy their 78th victim—and now they are guessing how long it will be before they see another movie.

POEMS THAT LIVE

Never Trouble Trouble I used to hear a saying That had a deal of pith; It gave a cheerful spirit To face existence with, Especially when matters Seemed domed to go askew Twas "Never trouble trouble Till troubl troubles you." Not woes at hand, those coming Are hardest to resist; We hear them stalk like giants, hear them through a mist. But big things in the brewing Are small things in the brew; So never trouble truble Till trouble troubles you.

Just look at things through glasses That show the evidence; One lens of them is courage, The other common sense. They'll make it clear, misgivings Are just a bugaboo: No more you'll trouble trouble

Copies of City's Traffic Code Now At Auto Club Office

Four thousand copies of the recently enacted traffic ordinance have been printed by the Columbiana County Motor Club and are now available for all motorists within the East Liverpool district at the club's headquarters 129 West Fifth street.

The ordinance, which was prepared under the direction of the automobile club officials, conforms with the state motor vehicle law and the ordinance in existence in most of the larger cities. It became effective here or October 15.

The measure has been published in booklet form in order that motorists may familiarize themselves with the traffic regulations not only as they exist here but in other cities. They are free for the asking.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 1-With the kick-off of the annual Yale-Army classic only a few hours away, football fans by the thousands poured in to New Haven today on special trains to witness what promised to be one of the most thrilling and desperately fought games of the season, with all its spectacular military trimmings.

Not since gridiron relations be-tween Yale and the Army were reestablished in 1921 has interest run so Seventy thousand persons, capacity of the famous Yale bowl, will see the

"anybody's game."

Special trains this morning brought nto New Haven many men of milttary importance, including graduates of the Military Academy at West Point and representatives of the war department. Secretary of War John W. Weeks, Major General James G. Harbord, second in command to General John Perishing in France and General Marvern Hill, Barnum, Comthe long list of Military men expected to be present at the bowl.

The pre-game activities of the parade of West Point Cadets in smart and snappy formations lured many of the incoming thousands almost as much as the contest itself.

It had been expected that the Yale eleven would go into action a slight favorite, but as the hour of the struggle neared, the tip came from the inside that the Army and their coaches are chuckful of confidence and more Army money made an appearance.

Yale has, perhaps, more reserve material to add an extra punch in emergency than have the cadets. But this year the Army has real power. Yale is regarded as faster, Army more rugged.

Army will start with virtually the same team that made such a good showing against Notre Dame earlier this season. It includes Harry Wil-son, all-American back at Penn State year; Bill Wood, one of the best kickers in the country, and Gilmore, the great defensive back.

Yale had had the better of it with the Army since the annual struggle was resumed in 1921, Old Eli winning

REV. F. E. BENNETT IN PULPIT HERE

East End churches will hold serv ices at the usual hours Sunday morning. Sunday school will be followed by preaching services. Rev. Fred E. Bennett, connected with the Biederevangelistic campaign, will preach in the Second United Presbyterian church. He will also speak in the Oakland Free Methodist church at the Sunday school session.

Quiet Hallowe'en Celebration.

Hallowe'en was celebrated here in a quiet manner, with many parties being held. Young people, in fancy and grotesque costumes, marched about the streets and many of these later participated in the street dance held in the downtown section.

Rally at Beaver Falls.

Large delegation of Midland Repub-licans will attend the closing rally of the campaign Saturday evening at Beaver Falls. Former Congressman William E. Coleman, of McKeesport, will deliver the principal address. A street parade will be staged prior to the program.

Defer Hunting Season Opening. Sportsmen in Pennsylvania, who had planned to launch the hunting season Saturday, were disappointed when they learned Friday that Governor Gifford Pinchot had issued a proclamation, defering the opening until November 6. The governor's action was based on the possibility of forest fires owing to the long stretch of dry weather.
